Aside from the sociological perspective from Bourdieu<sup>1</sup>, there is no agreed definition of cultural capital (CC). In terms of educational development, however, it is understood as knowledge, experience and skills relating to cultural matters that can help improve a child's life chances and enrich them. A definition of cultural capital from Bourdieu's work is given at the end of this policy.

Evidence shows that educational attainment is strongly associated with participation in cultural activities, including reading books, experiencing cinema, theatre, museums, concert attendance, as well as experiencing art galleries and a broad range of music. Enhancing a pupil's awareness of culture is also important for social mobility. It is our responsibility to make our pupils aware of the richness of their own Western and non-Western culture.

Appleford School is committed to safeguarding and promoting the welfare of students and young people and expects all staff and volunteers to share this commitment. It is our aim that all students fulfil their potential.

Appleford School is committed to improving pupils' cultural awareness with a view to broadening their minds and providing them with tools to gain personal enjoyment and vicarious pleasure, especially from collective experiences, such as a musical or concert. Developing cultural capital is also intricately linked to personal development of pupils, as well as spiritual, social, moral, and physical development, all of which are highly interdependent. It is important for us to express interest in the ethnic backgrounds of pupils and be mindful of cultural sensitivities.

Appleford School has a limited mix of ethnicities. We recognise that increasing pupils' cultural awareness has real benefits in both the short and long-term. Greater awareness and access to cultural events and issues tends to increase a pupil's curiosity, improves their level of confidence, and their ability to focus and concentrate<sup>2</sup>. Appleford School links aspects of CC to other important matters such as:

- Mental health and wellbeing
- SEN
- Physical Activity
- PSHE and SMSC
- Career opportunities
- Digital/economic/ emotional literacy
- Social awareness
- Personal development
- British Values in terms of respecting pluralism and tolerance of diversity

Cultural Capital at Appleford

Our aim is to enrich every child's school experience and create an environment where they are encouraged to succeed and be the best they can be. Cultural capital is about preparing children with the knowledge and skills for what comes next. We realise the exploration of new skills and experiences helps to nurture resilience, curiosity and creativity. Ultimately, this leads to the growth of new forms of cultural capital that makes a difference in individual mindsets and shapes the future.

In addition to cultural references that are already embedded in the core curriculum, CC is practically realised through:

- The theatre
- Nature walks
- Visits to historic and iconic buildings such as local castles.
- Visits to Museums
- Biology and geography field trips – getting pupils out with nature (biophilia)
- Visits to West End theatres (while on residential)
- Art gallery and art exhibition visits
- Outside speakers to talk about career opportunities
- British Armed Forces to discuss the role, value and purpose of a modern military and its role in humanitarian intervention, amongst many other roles

Access to and engagement with:

- A range of fiction and non-fiction literature: Appleford School encourages pupils to access and read the books in the library.
- Reading poetry and plays
- Book reviews
- Engagement with pupils via: Pupil Council
- Peripatetic lessons
- Music club
- Charity events
- Drawing, painting and sculpting

Cultural Capital: Meaning and Definition

Appleford School is committed to safeguarding and promoting the welfare of students and young people and expects all staff and volunteers to share this commitment. It is our aim that all students fulfil their potential.

Bourdieu identified three sources of cultural capital:

1. Objective: cultural goods, books, works of art
2. Embodied: language, mannerisms, preferences
3. Institutionalised: qualifications, education credentials

More recent work on the idea of cultural capital by a range of academics has added

- Technical: IT and use of technology
- Emotional: empathy
- National and subcultural forms of cultural capital: prevailing popular culture
